THE HOMEOPATHIC COLLEGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, March 4, 1856. Last Saturday, March 1, the Homeopathic College of Pennsylvania, celebrated its Ninth Annual Commencement. A short account of this interesting solemnity, and of the condition of the College, may not be out of place in the columns of your paper, which is universally looked upon as the most able and energetic advocate of truth and progress in our country. The Musical Fund Hall, where the exercises took place, was crowded to its utmost capacity. Two-thirds of the audience were ladies, comprising the beauty and fashion of Philadelphia. The graduating class compared favorably with any similar class in our Allopathic Colleges; they seemed to be a band of youthful inquirers, some of whom will no doubt be a blessing to their country. The students of the Homeopathic College in this city receive a thorough instruction in all the medical sciences, and in the science of Homeopathy in particular. From my personal experience, I am prepared to assert that the Professors, as a body, are not inferior to any medical faculty in this country. The valedictory address, of which I send you a copy, embodies the sentiments which animate the Beard of Teachers toward their pupils, sentiments of great kindness and paternal regard. I may as well state in this place that the obstetrical department is most admirably managed, both as regards the exposition of principles and the opportunities for practice, by Professor Ward, the author of the address.

All the best families in this city employ Homeopathic physicians. It is no small bonor to Philadelphia that the first Homeopathic College, with a full Board of Professors, should have been organized by the liberality of her citizens, under a charter of the State Legislature. Thus it is that, even in medicine, our glorious country takes the lead of Europe. C. J. S. The Musical Fund Hall, where the exercises took

Banner, of St.-Mary's, La, of the 27th ult, gives the following account of the destructive fire and frightful explosion at St Martinsville, in this State:

"On Sunday evening last a fire broke out in St. Martinsville, which not only laid waste the principal portion of the town, but was attended by a fearful loss of life. The circumstances, so for as we have learned them, are these: The fire originated in a stable in the rear of Mr. Fontanette's, to which the flames quickly reached, and spreading themselves in their destructive progress, in a short time the entire square was a mass of flame. This square embraced the principal business houses of the town, some of them fine brick buildings, containing a quantity of valuable merchandise. In one of these stores were forty kegs of guspowder, which exploded with a tremendous report, blew down the walls, carried in the roof, and buried in the ruins thirteen persons who were in the store at the time, endeavoring to save what they could from the conflagration. All these persons are said to have been instantly killed. We have not been able to learn the names of the sufferers. The gentleman who furnished the information was an eye-witness to this awful scene, and estimates the probable loss of property to be about $200,000. We cannot learn that any of this loss was covered by insurance. Since the above was written we learn from another source that twenty-three persons are missed since the explosion occurred, and the supposition is that they are among the victims. A gentleman who arrived here last night by the mail-boat states that when he left St. Martinsville seventeen bodies had been found among the ruins, and that a diligent search was then being made for others who are supposited to be there."
